CO 5	2	2	2	2	3	2	2	2
CO 6	3	2	2	3	2	3	2	3

Justification for the mapping

PO1. Research-Related Skills:

Linked COs: CO2 (Historical Perspective), CO3 (Critical Thinking Skills), CO4 (Application of Political Theories)

Justification: The study of political thought requires research skills to understand the historical development of political ideas, critically analyze political theories, and apply them to contemporary issues.

PO2. Effective Citizenship and Ethics:

Linked COs: CO1 (Understanding of Political Concepts), CO7 (Ethical Considerations), CO8 (Global Perspective)

Justification: Political concepts and theories are inherently tied to ethical considerations and global perspectives. Understanding these concepts contributes to informed and ethical citizenship.

PO3. Social Competence:

Linked COs: CO6 (Communication Skills)

Justification: Effective communication of political ideas requires social competence. Developing communication skills enhances interpersonal relationships, both in personal and professional settings.

PO4. Disciplinary Knowledge:

Linked COs: CO1 (Understanding of Political Concepts), CO2 (Historical Perspective), CO4 (Application of Political Theories), CO5 (Comparison of Political Theories), CO8 (Global Perspective)

Justification: The course outcomes cover a broad range of political concepts, theories, and their applications, contributing to a strong disciplinary knowledge base.

PO5. Personal and Professional Competence:

Linked COs: CO6 (Communication Skills), CO8 (Global Perspective)

Justification: Developing communication skills and understanding global perspectives contribute to personal and professional competence, enabling students to work independently and collaboratively.

PO6. Self-directed and Life-long Learning:

Linked COs: CO2 (Historical Perspective), CO3 (Critical Thinking Skills), CO4 (Application of Political Theories), CO5 (Comparison of Political Theories), CO8 (Global Perspective)

Justification: The study of political theories fosters critical thinking and encourages lifelong learning by tracing the historical development of ideas and exploring diverse perspectives.

PO7. Environment and Sustainability:

Linked COs: CO4 (Application of Political Theories), CO8 (Global Perspective)

Justification: Understanding political theories in a global context includes recognizing the impact of solutions on societal and environmental contexts, aligning with the need for sustainable development.

PO8. Critical Thinking and Problem Solving:

Linked COs: CO3 (Critical Thinking Skills), CO4 (Application of Political Theories), CO5 (Comparison of Political Theories)

Justification: The course outcomes explicitly address critical thinking skills and problem-solving, emphasizing their application to real-world political issues.

PO8. Critical Thinking and Problem solving: Exhibit the skill of critical thinking and use higher order cognitive skills to approach problems situated in their Social environment, propose feasible solutions and help in its implementation.

Course Outcomes:

CO1. Understanding of Key Thinkers : Students should gain a comprehensive understanding of the major political thinkers in the Western tradition. This may include figures such as Plato, Aristotle, Machiavelli, Hobbes, Locke, Rousseau, Marx, and others.

CO2. Critical Analysis Skills: The ability to critically analyze and evaluate key political texts and ideas is a crucial outcome. Students should be able to assess the arguments put forth by these thinkers and understand the historical and philosophical contexts in which they were writing.

CO3. Historical Context: A grasp of the historical context in which these political ideas emerged is important. This involves understanding the political, social, and economic conditions that influenced the development of political thought at different points in history.

CO4. Comparative Analysis: Students may be expected to compare and contrast the ideas of different political thinkers. This could involve examining similarities and differences in their views on topics such as the state, justice, authority, and individual rights.

CO5. Application of Political Concepts: The ability to apply key political concepts to contemporary issues is often an important outcome. This could involve using historical political theories to analyze and understand modern political phenomena.

CO6. Development of Argumentation Skills: Students should be able to formulate and articulate clear, well-reasoned arguments based on the ideas and theories they have studied. This could involve both written and oral communication skills.

CO7. Awareness of Ideological Diversity: A recognition of the diverse range of political ideologies within the Western tradition is another important outcome. Students should understand that there is not a single, unified Western political ideology but rather a spectrum of ideas.

CO8. Ethical Considerations: Exploration of ethical dimensions in political thought is often included. This might involve examining the ethical implications of different political theories and considering the moral foundations of political authority.

Justification for the mapping

PO1: Research-Related Skills:

Justification COs: CO1 focuses on the analysis and comprehension of political systems, requiring students to demonstrate research skills in understanding the structures and dynamics of political systems at various levels. CO2 and CO3 also involve developing a sociological imagination and exploring political beliefs shaped by social institutions, requiring research-related skills.

PO2: Effective Citizenship and Ethics:

Justification COs: CO4 and CO5 involve examining concepts of power, authority, and legitimacy within political systems, requiring students to demonstrate an awareness of moral and ethical issues. CO8, which analyzes the relationship between the state and civil society, also aligns with the commitment to professional ethics and responsibility.

PO3: Social Competence:

Justification COs: CO2 emphasizes the development of sociological imagination, which involves expressing oneself clearly and precisely to understand individual experiences in broader political structures. CO8, focusing on the relationship between the state and civil society, requires effective communication skills in discussing citizen participation in political life.

PO4: Disciplinary Knowledge:

Justification COs: All COs contribute to the development of disciplinary knowledge in political science. From analyzing political systems (CO1) to understanding the impact of globalization (CO7), students gain a comprehensive understanding of political structures and processes.

PO5: Personal and Professional Competence:

Justification COs: CO6 involves exploring the relationship between political structures and social inequality, contributing to the development of strong work attitudes and professional skills needed to address societal issues. CO8 also emphasizes citizen participation in political life, fostering collaborative work in a team environment.

PO6: Self-directed and Life-long Learning:

Justification COs: CO1, CO2, and CO5 all require critical thinking and higher-order cognitive skills to analyze political systems, sociological imagination, and power dynamics. These skills contribute to the ability to engage in independent and lifelong learning.

PO7: Environment and Sustainability:

Justification COs: CO7 explicitly addresses the impact of globalization on political processes and institutions, demonstrating an understanding of the societal and environmental contexts in which political solutions operate.

PO8: Critical Thinking and Problem Solving:

Justification COs: All COs, from analyzing political systems (CO1) to exploring inequality (CO6) and understanding the role of social movements (CO5), contribute to the development of critical thinking skills needed to approach and propose feasible solutions to political problems.
